

Biden's China Team

One of the biggest challenges facing the United States is how to deal with China, a strategic rival but also a military and space power and soon to be home to the world's largest economy. President Biden has selected a diverse team of high ranking officials to engage with China. Here are, as of March 19, some of his picks.

This is a preliminary and incomplete list of officials who might engage with China. It does not include, for the most part, civil servants. Also, the positioning of officials does not always show who a person reports to directly.